Collection-level Scope and Content Note

This collection was gathered from material that had been dispersed in various locations in the Georgetown University Archives. Material is arranged by geographic location and then by university, college, seminary, manor, mission, or novitiate. Members of the Maryland Province Society of Jesus operated a number of parishes, some of which later were transferred to the secular clergy. These account for the numerous geographical locations. In addition, certain locations of major Jesuit installations figure more frequently, and those tend to include larger quantities of papers and archival material. It should be noted that the designation of place names vary and are referred to by geographical name (Port Tobacco or Bel Alton) or by formal name (St. Thomas Manor). It is also important to note that the Jesuit organization in what is now the northeastern part of the United States was known first as a mission (1634-1833), becoming Maryland Province from 1833 to 1880; then Maryland-New York Province from 1880 to circa 1975, before being reduced in geographical scope when the New York area was separated from it. For consistency through these administrative evolutions and varying titles, the collection is called simply the Maryland Province Collection (MD PROV COLL), and is divided into series which correspond to geographical locations. Geographically related smaller missions are grouped into a series. For a map and brief organizational history, see "Atlas Geographicus Societatis Jesu" (Paris, 1900), "Provincia Marylandiae-Neo Eboracensis."

Collection-level Access Restrictions

Most manuscripts collections at the Georgetown University Booth Family Center for Special Collections are open to researchers; however, restrictions may apply to some collections. Collections stored off site require a minimum of three days for retrieval. For use of all manuscripts collections, researchers are advised to contact the Booth Family Center for Special Collections in advance of any visit.

Whitemarsh / Archbishop Marechal Controversy

Series-level Scope and Content Note

In the early nineteenth century the Archbishop of Baltimore contended that Whitemarsh properly belonged under his control. The Jesuits resisted, and the matter eventually ended up in Rome (more than once). The Jesuits retained the property until selling most of it for development after World War II.

Physical Description: This and the two following folders contain letters and statements (and contemporary and modern copies) pertaining to the lengthy and complex controversy between Ambrose Marechal, Archbishop of Baltimore (1817-1828), and the Jesuits of Maryland over the rights to the income from properties the Jesuits received in the 18th c. Initially concerning several properties, it narrowed to an interest in Whitemarsh because that was closest to Baltimore, or that at least was the reason Marechal gave. The documents here are only a portion of all those pertaining to the controversy. See T. Hughes, SJ, "Hist of Society," Docs., V. 1, Pt 1, 386-600 for further documentation.

Truth & Trust, & St. Thomas's, St. Mary's Co., MD

Series-level Scope and Content Note

This series begins with very early (17th c.) documents tracing the rights of the Jenkins family in the property which later was operated by the Jesuits. NB: 'Truth and Trust' and St. Thomas's land adjoined each other in St. Mary's Co., Maryland. This is not the St. Thomas Residence operated by the Jesuits in Charles Co., Maryland, a site lying some thirty miles further west.

Series-level Scope and Content Note

This series groups material on Jesuit places in St. Mary's County, except for 'St. Thomas's Land' and 'Truth & Trust' which were covered in the preceding series. Very little material from those Jenkins-related places were associated with the places of this series except near the end (1840s) when some contracts concerning the two former Jenkins properties were executed by Jesuits stationed at Newtown. Generally, however, while series 5 and 6 both concern St. Mary's County, the two have little in common.

During this period the church was not Jesuit, but was under the control of the Bp of Wilmington. Nevertheless, a certain amount of communication between St. Joseph's and Georgetown continued, bringing this material.

Frederick, MD: St. John's Ch. & Coll.; Novitiate

Series-level Scope and Content Note

'Frederick, Md.' insofar as the Jesuits are concerned is a confused matter due to the frequently changing scope of their operations there. St. John's Church was the earliest form of Jesuit service, but in 1829-1859 they also operated a 'St. John's Literary Institution' which came to be called St. John's College. The Jesuits later phased this out and it devolved into a lower-level school. At the same time, two orders of nuns operated schools for girls, and, from 1834 until 1903 The Maryland-New York Province maintained its Novitiate training for entering Jesuits in Frederick. Most of the above operations took place near the present St. John's Church on Second Street, but there was one site outside of town and also a 'villa' or vacation spot west of Frederick, where biological warfare research is now conducted by the U.S. government. At various times the Society served a half-dozen missions within Frederick County. The bulk of papers in this series pertain to the Novitiate, the next largest group to the College, and the rest to the Church or personalities. None pertain directly to the missions in Frederick County outside the city.

Physical Description: Two diaries, bound within boards, of medium-size. The first is by the Manuductor of Novices and might be compared with earlier versions from Whitemarsh elsewhere in this collection. The second is by the Infirmarian, reporting the activities of Doctor Miller, who began 17 March 1846. This is in the vernacular and reports the ill-health of novices, brothers, and priests by name. Provides a good look at treatments and their frequencies--bleeding--and medications--oil, salt, rhubarb, aloes, gumarabic, sage, honey, molasses, magnesia, and so forth. Describes the day-by-day progress--or sinking--until recovery or death.

Some of the music is in multiple copies.

Woodstock College, Howard/Baltimore Counties, MD

Series-level Scope and Content Note

Woodstock College was, during most of its existence, the principal seminary for the Jesuits in the Eastern U.S. The students, numbering from roughly 50 to 300, spent three years there generally, in a college-like, rural, and somewhat isolated environment. This is a lengthy series -- three boxes -- spanning the time from the foundation of Woodstock in 1867-1869 until it was closed, sold, and turned to other purposes in 1969-1971. The series begins with all the pertinent correspondence --about thirteen folders--arranged chronologically covering the entire period. Other aspects of the series are then arranged according to the degree of originality of the material, divided roughly into 19th century and 20th century sections. Original manuscripts or publications are followed by printed ephemera and then clippings through each of the two centuries. Finally, there are separate folders for unpublished histories, Woodstock's missions, the Woodstock-Georgetown formal affiliation, conferences at Woodstock, and one file on the closing of Woodstock. The series concludes with a file of photos, and with two biographical files on two men associated especially with Woodstock: Charles Maldonado, S.J., and Edwin Sanders, S.J.

Physical Description: Small printed items, generally programs, from the Woodstock College Press. They demonstrate student interests and activities; show the programs given visitors (such as the Abp of Baltimore), those given on St. Catherine's Day, given on scientific and mechanical subjects, and given to departing Fathers. Considering the components of the programs, with music, poems, and speeches, they show that during this period the College was largely dependent upon its own resources for entertainment.

Physical Description: Several typewritten histories of Woodstock. One, of about 23 pp. appearsto be by Devitt, Rev. E.I., SJ, or derived from the kinds of histories thathe wrote. It covers 1869 until 1915 and is in two slightly differentversions. There is also a recapitulation of the numbers of priests ordainedat Woodstock from 1870 through 1940, and finally, there is an amusingaccount by Fr. Repetti of the installation of electricity (with their ownplant) in about 1919. The account is incomplete in many technical respects(what kind of fuel and steam-engine was used) but reminds one of hisaccount of the installation of indoor plumbing at one of the Residences inSouthern Maryland.

Physical Description: This folder is organized on different principals than the earlier part of the series. It is limited to one subject--the so-called "integration" of Woodstock College and Georgetown, including the discussions leading up to it, the signing of the agreement in 1935, and the eventual dissolution of the "integration" in 1944. The original purpose of affiliating the two appeared to be to meet a need or desire to give standard terminology (A.B., A.M., Ph.D.) to the degrees that Woodstock College was awarding, so that the world outside the Society would understand the relative value of the degrees that Jesuits had been awarded. Attaching Woodstock to Georgetown was thus a way to provide the necessary measure and value to Woodstock's education. In 1944 Woodstock obtained its own accreditation and did not, therefore, need any longer to be attached to Georgetown.

Physical Description: This correspondence between Loyola College, Balto and Georgetown continues, with most of it being accounted for by Vincent F. Beatty, SJ, Pres of Loyola, and Edward B., Bunn, SJ, Pres of Georgetown. Because Bunn had previously been head of Loyola, some of this is enlightening as it explains the situation at Loyola College at an earlier time when Bunn was there as president. Not only that period, but the years encompassed in this folder, were clearly times when efforts at administrative and fiscal rationalization were underway at both places, and efforts were being made to find out the intent of bequests and gifts, and to bring order into the records.

Mount St. Mary's, Emmitsburg, MD (Non-Jesuit)

Series-level Scope and Content Note

This college was not operated by the Jesuits, but because of its close physical proximity to Georgetown and Woodstock, and the great age which it was proud of sharing with Georgetown, considerable interaction with Georgetown is reflected in this series.

Province-Wide General Material and Miscellaneous

Series-level Scope and Content Note

This series brings together all the material not clearly associated with specific geographical locations in the province, and includes three isolated missions not associated with any previous locations. There is, nevertheless, in parts of this series a tendency toward geographic emphasis. For example, the papers on the novices tend to focus on geographic locations as the novitiates moved from place to place. In general, this series contains lists of SJ members, their death dates, and their entry dates, with some additional kinds of papers from later periods such as the Province newsletter.

Physical Description: This folder contains a partly-mimeographed, partly-typed transcription of the "Catalog of Members of the Maryland Mission of the Society of Jesus, 1634-1806," in other words, the Society in North America before a province was created. It is bound within boards, indexed, and carries the notation that it (perhaps the index only) was done in 1949 from notes left by Rev. John A. Morgan, SJ. This copy contains a few handwritten corrections or supplements, along with added bibliographical citations or cross-references. The work is organized one page per year, subdivided by location, with names of Jesuits for each, thus it contains about 175 lvs.

JESUITS -LIST OF -FROM ENGLAND -COMING TO N. AMERICA -1632-1790: Manuscript

Identifier: 19830

Physical Description: This is a ledger, bound with boards, containing two MS lists: English Jesuit fathers who came to "these parts" from 1634 up 'til 1790, and a list of those who died on the American mission from 1630 until 1805. The latter provides names and places, but rarely the cause or age before 1800. Most deaths, when location and cause are given, follow a pattern. However, there is the occasional drowning, or death in a faraway place, e.g., on the Mediterranean, in Mexico, or in Rio de Janeiro.

Manuscript

Identifier: 19833

Physical Description: This is a ledger-type indexed volume bound in boards that lists the entering novices in Maryland from 1860 through 1874. Providing much better information than that usually given, it is a potentially useful demographic source. It contains the date, birth date, place of birth, parents names and whether living or not, number of siblings, education, trade or apprenticeship (if any), sometimes trade of father and misc. information. A later hand sometimes described the results of entering the Society--death or dismissal, and sometimes the reasons--ill-health, craziness, unfitness, etc. A few were subsequently very successful.

Identifier: 19847

Physical Description: This is a bound volume of medium-size format, untitled and unsigned. From internal evidence it appears to be from papers left at Georgetown by a Jesuit who had taught in Philadelphia. There is a school ledger for 1855-56 showing payments of parents for their children; in addition, there are some poems in English on Woodstock and Inkerman (Crimean War), and some Latin notes on a lecture, "De Matrimonio." There is also an index to what is apparently a Jesuit manual of authority.
